

Overview

Tent Peak also called “Tharpu Chuli” is one of the popular trekking peaks in the Annapurna Himalayan range. The peak is centrally located in the Annapurna Sanctuary. It is easier to climb than both Hiunchuli and Singu Chuli which also are sister trekking peaks in the area. The climbing to tent peak needs ice climbing equipment. A climbing permit from the NMA used to cost US$350 for a team of up to four members. As of 2017 NMA has removed Tharpu Chuli from its list of Trekking Peaks, so no permits are required to climbing it. This small expedition can be arranged as Annapurna Base Camp trek and after that we need to camp for 2-3 night to Tent peak base camp.

Tent Peak (5663m/18,575 ft), rightly positioned towards the south of the Annapurna Base Camp. We trek in the Annapurna region admiring the diverse in vegetation and culture of Nepal. Our ultimate object which is summiting the Tent Peak or Tharpu Chuli rewards you outstanding panoramic view of the central Himalayas including Annapurna, Hiunchuli, Machhapuchhre and many more nearby snowy peaks. Our 17 day itinerary starts and ends in Kathmandu but the real trek starts from Naya Pul located near Pokhara, the beautiful ‘Lake City’. Reaching the base camp of Mt. Machapuchhre gives us another good reason to choose the Tent Peak (Tharpu Chuli) Climbing trip.
